

Slaughterhouse workers suffer from PTSD which leads to domestic violence, social withdrawal, and substance abuse. Many of these workers are undocumented immigrants who have no choice.

Workers suffer extreme injuries from handling large terrified animals, resulting in at least two amputations a week in the US from workplace injuries. They are paid on average $10.00 an hour.

Slaughterhouse employment increases total arrest rates for violent crimes, mostly for rape and other forms of sexual assault. The psyche is irrevocably damaged, as workers learn to disassociate and to view living things as objects.
